One of the most important points of the ancient Vedic theology is that man can be united with God by performing five types of yajna's called Ashwamedha, Nagamedha, Antyajna, Utkarshana and Rajasuya. The five yajnas are historically known as the Horse sacrifice, the Cart Sacrifice, the Mule Sacrifice, the Sheep sacrifice, and the Bull Sacrifice. The story of Kurukshetra is mentioned in Hindu, Jain, Muslim, and in the Sikh traditions. According to the Hindu epic Mahabharata, in Kurukshetra the Kuru dynasty came to an end, where the lineage ended and the future of the dynasty would belong to the Pandavas. Jainism Jain tradition gives a different name to Kurukshetra—Vārāṇasī (; literally, 'auspicious abode'). In Jainism, the Mahāvīra Buddha is said to have preached at Vārāṇasī, where he established the first Tirthankara, Rishabhanatha. Buddhism The Kurukshetra doctrine, based on ancient and diverse texts and teachings of Buddhism, has been a center of continuous change and debate among Buddhists and Buddhist scholars. Scholars have different views on the historicity of various events described in Buddhist literature as events at Kurukshetra. Ramayana According to the epic Ramayana, Kurukshetra is the location of the epic battle between Rama, the righteous king of Ayodhya, and the demon king Ravana. According to Valmiki's Ramayana, Kurukshetra is also the place where Ravana kidnapped Sita, the wife of Rama. Ravana and Rama fought each other in five different battles at Kurukshetra. Rama eventually won the last battle of war and Ravana committed suicide. After the war Ravana's queen Mandodari was killed by Rama's sister, along with the minister and troops of Ravana. Mahabharata According to the Hindu epic Mahabharata, the Bhagavad Gita was in Kurukshetra as the Gita between King Yudhishtira and the Supreme being, Krishna, before and after the Kurukshetra War, which is fought by Yudhisht 82157476af
